In 1823, Hugh Glass (Leonardo DiCaprio), a fur trapper, is severely injured by a bear while his comrade John Fitzgerald (Tom Hardy) is killed. Before dying, Fitzgerald tells Glass to travel west to find relief for his injuries; Fitzgerald then dies of his wounds. While alone, Glass' only companion within miles of civilization is another bear, which he kills. Unconsciousness, dehydration and starvation force him to venture into the wilderness again when he wakes up 12 days later with no food or water. In his deteriorated condition, Glass recalls the event of how he acquired his scars and survival techniques. In an attempt to find Fitzgerald's body, Glass' group of trappers is ambushed by a war party of Native Americans. In a frenzied action, Glass kills a member who later mocks him at the funeral scene. When they realize that they have been betrayed by a local Ojibwe tribe led by Black Shawl (Will Poulter), the trappers begin to massacre them all. After denying their betrayal on behalf of his tribe, Black Shawl invites Glass to join him in his village where he will be cared for and given water. Glass agrees and is taken to the Ojibwe village where he is treated with great hospitality. The trappers return to their encampment, where they fight over the possession of pelts they collected at the trading post. Henry (Forrest Goodluck), one of the trappers, kills one of his colleagues in anger after revealing that Fitzgerald stole his rifle and ammunition. After the remaining trappers receive news of their comrade's death, they quickly abandon camp to attempt to reach Fort Kiowa where they would be safe under U.S. Army protection. While leaving, Henry proceeds to shoot Glass who is left for dead by his companions.
